

Abby Silva

she grew up in New Orleans, Louisiana where she began studying dance from an early age. Immediately after high school she moved to New York City to Marymount Manhattan College, where she later graduated completing a Bachelor of Fine Arts in modern dance and performing, beginning her collaboration with Parsons Dance.

During her years with the company Abby traveled around the world dancing and teaching. He has collaborated with Mr. Parsons on various projects such as Verdi's Aida in the historic Arena of Verona. Other notable projects as lead dancer in Remember Me, which was filmed and broadcast by PBS in America.

She danced at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City in Rigoletto produced by Michael Mayer, Two Boys with music by Nico Muhly choreography by Hofesh Shechter, as well as Turandot, Aida, Les Contes d'Hoffman, Parsifal, and Don Giovanni.

Abby was named "One to Watch" in Dance Magazine and landed the magazine's cover. She collaborated as a model for O Magazine and for Jordan Matter's photography book "Dancers Among Us". After the birth of their second child Abby and her family moved to Italy, but remained linked to the Parsons Dance Company. In recent years Abby has taught and danced in Italy, her desire is to continue expressing her art and to be able to make her experience available to the most talented and willing dancers.

Since September 2021 he has been a modern teacher at the Balletto di Verona